Scalp, skits, and summer standings

By Jack Greco

We had a big week in Deerhorn sports featuring the first game of Scalp, skit night, and much more. In our first game of Scalp the Apache were victorious. It came down to Jack Greco (A), Diego Baños (A), Evan Palatnik (C), Leo Bopp (N), and Mac Shea (I). Greco pulled Shea just before being pulled by Palatnik. Palatnik was then pulled by Bopp who fell short to Baños in the end. Leader Griff Parry and his Navajo team took the second game. The third game featured a huge upset when lone Iroquois, Trevor Yamada, took down four Chippewas in a series of one v. ones. The 'Quois also took the voyager game with Griff Parry getting banged up in the process. Shifting the attention to Skit Night, the Iroquois seniors beat out the other three teams with a very interesting skit about Shrek. The Chippewa juniors and intermediates emerged victorious with an intense rap battle. Currently in the summer long standings, the Apache still lead with the Chips close in second. The Navajo squad is still sitting in third with the Iroquois sitting tight in last.

Leader Spotlight: Griff Parry

By Quinn Hedges and Ryder Broadbridge

Q: Why did you chose to lead the Navajo team?

A: I love the color blue, and I think that 'Navajo' is a really cool name.

Q: What is your favorite Sunday Event?

A: I love Attack of the Sioux because it's fun for everyone and I love getting the chance at beating the counselors, but always seem to fall short and end up losing.

Q: What was your favorite year to be a camper?

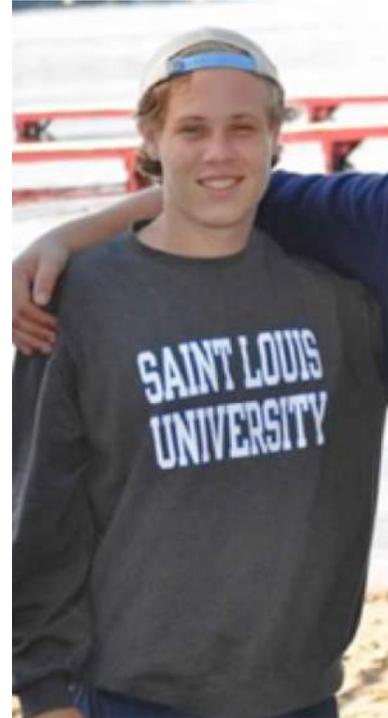

A: My voyager year was so much fun because it was all my friends who I had known for years at camp on the trip, and I made memories that lasted forever.

Q: What is your favorite Sports & Games activity?

A: I love Klepton because mixing capture the flag and scalp is always an absolute blast

Q: If you could add one activity to camp what would it be?

A: I think adding a zip line would be really cool. Some sort of zip line obstacle course through camp seems like it would be a ton of fun.

A day at the waterfront

By Mike 'Squirrel' Maicke

Phillip Meyers dug his front foot in the sand as his back foot rested against the sandy wooden beam. Once other campers locked in the similar position, they simultaneous took off in a mad dash to the water. Machine gun runs ran rampant for the entirety of the normally structured Saturday afternoon activity periods. By the beginning of the final period of the day, the waterfront counselors were joined by landlubbers trying to cool down in the 82 degree weather. From the Skeeter to the golf green groups of all ages enjoyed an afternoon full of water basketball, sandcastle building, and trips to the rave. Golf instructor Jack Mignin gave campers in his class the rare opportunity to putt down the waterslide into a small bucket, as Sports & Games and Basketball claimed the inner "A" Dock. The Spike Bucks experienced one of the hottest and sunniest days that Deerhorn has encountered this summer. Water skiing counselor Mark Deacon caught sporadic glimpses of the beach from his ski boat. "It was really cool, seeing that many kids on the beach and in the water having fun was great. I liked seeing the older guys and the younger guys hanging out," Deacon said.

Engels' Eats

By Tommy Engels

Welcome to Deerhorn Spike Buck campers! We have had many good meals here at camp this whole summer, and although you may have missed a few favorites, here are some good ones to watch out for. Donut day is always one of the best breakfasts we have here, and one of the best lunches is without a doubt grilled cheese, which we were lucky to enjoy a few days ago. Something to watch out for during the final days of the session is the awards breakfast waffles, with whipped cream. One of the best parts about our food is that if you don't like the main course, there is usually a salad or fruit bar to go to that is always reliable. I'll be sharing my thoughts on the best meals in camp throughout the rest of the session, so if you'd like your opinion known, find me during meals or in activities and you may have your own opinions included here in our food critic corner!
